GNU LIBRARY GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2.1, February 1999

Copyright (C) 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc. 51 Franklin St, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301, USA. Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, provided that you change it to suit all circumstances.

This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, hence the version number '2.1'.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have the right to control where the software you run is going to be used, and that you also have the right to deal with your copy of the software as you wish.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some software. It is designed to make sure that you have the right to control where the software you run is going to be used, and that you also have the right to deal with your copy of the software as you wish.

When you speak of free software, you mean freedom of the user not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the right to distribute copies of free software (and charge for this service if you wish), that you receive source code of any software that you use, that you can change the software and distribute your modifications to the public.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change any software you receive. You may freely copy, modify, and improve the software. You may distribute the original or a modified version of the software under any license conditions. You may even combine pieces of software with different license conditions to cover different parts of the program. You may also make sure that you provide the same rights to the users of the software you distribute.

When you copy, modify, or improve software, you are encouraged to share the results of your work. You have no obligation to do so, and you may not want to. However, the common sense is to share the results of your work if you do so, to enable the community to benefit from the improvements you have made. It is therefore the intent of this license to encourage you to do so, to enable the community to benefit from the improvements you have made. It is therefore the intent of this license to encourage you to do so, to enable the community to benefit from the improvements you have made.

Finally, our free software is licensed to you under this license, which means that you are free to copy, modify, and improve the software, and to distribute the results of your work under any license conditions. END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you modify a Free Software Program, you should place this license at the beginning of the program and you should place this license in any files you create that contain the program's source code.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If it is not possible to do so, place the notices in the documentation or wherever it is customary to put notices about copyright and the program's licensing conditions. Each notice should have at least the following text and structure (the text in brackets indicates suggested text that you should insert):

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does.
Copyright (C) year name of author

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts (an interactive window should display this message):

Copyright (C) year name of author
This is free software; you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions. See the file 'COPYING' for details.

The hypothetical command 'show w' and 'show c' should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. For users who cannot see the screen, you should also consider providing a paper version of the license. You should also get your reader (if you work in a program) or your editor, if any, to show a copyright notice for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

typedef, Inc. hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program 'Connection' (which makes passes in computers) written by James Hacker.

This General Public License does not allow commercial organizations to sublicense or redistribute the program as a proprietary program. If your program is a derivative work, you may modify and redistribute it under the terms of the GNU General Public License. If this is not your intention, you should use a different license. For more information, see the GNU General Public License instead of this license.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, June 1991

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you, the user, are free to share it with others. So, copyright holders of free software programs make sure you are free to copy it, to change it, to improve it, to redistribute it, and to allow others to do the same. The only way to protect your program from this kind of copying is to put into it measures that automatically prevent anyone who distributes it from passing on a copy to others that is not authorized by you. These measures, being necessary to protect your rights, are used by those who distribute software, but have a drawback: they prohibit you and others from sharing your program with those to whom you wish to give it. You are not free to give it, for example, to your neighbor or to a colleague. This situation is unsatisfactory because everyone would rather like to extend the number of recipients than restrict it. Therefore, to avoid this problem, the copyright holder of a program usually makes it public in the hope that别人 will not distribute it without their agreement. It is thus no surprise that copyright holders are more inclined to use licenses which authorize copying and distribution. We do not wish to inhibit them in this endeavor. The purpose of this license is to make sure all people have the freedom to share their program with others.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (not charge for this) and that you can change it and distribute copies of it to others. You are not permitted to charge anyone else for software you distribute. You are not permitted to charge anyone else for the documentation that accompanies the software, either. You may, however, charge a fee for services for making copies or for providing assistance. For example, you may charge a fee for distributing copies of a CD-ROM.

You protect your rights by making sure you give others the rights you have. You must make sure that they receive copies of this license if they receive copies of any part of the program. You must also make sure that they receive a copy of the original source code. You must also make sure that they know their rights. We protect your rights by taking steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and is distributed, it is no longer the work of the original author. We do not want to reduce the contributions of other authors to ours. Any changes to our version are published as a separate version, so the original author's contribution remains unaltered in the eyes of others. We wish to emphasize that there is no warranty for this free software.

Finally, our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (not charge for this) and that you can change it and distribute copies of it to others. You are not permitted to charge anyone else for software you distribute. You are not permitted to charge anyone else for the documentation that accompanies the software, either. You may, however, charge a fee for services for making copies or for providing assistance. For example, you may charge a fee for distributing copies of a CD-ROM.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification are listed below.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Terms and Conditions for Coping, Distribution and Modification

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this general public license. This license applies to the program as a whole, and to any derivative work under copyright law that is based on the program, whether it be a translation, adaptation, or other form of the program. (Hereinafter, translation is included without limitation in the term 'modification'.) Each licensee is addressed as 'you'.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this license. They are outside its scope. The act of copying the program or other work is not restricted, and the act of distributing it is covered only if it is covered by one of the provisions of this license. Whether that is true depends on what the Program does.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you find it in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this license, and you provide a copy of this license to each recipient of any such copy; you must also cause each recipient of any such copy to be aware that they have received a copy of this license and to open a separate file to read this license and to file it in a directory along with the Program.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program in any manner if it, thus forming a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications to other people under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program.

c) If the modified program normally runs interactively, you must also cause it, when running, to print or display an announcement including the copyright notice and a reference to this license. For example, a program might print something like this: 'Copyright (C) 1989 by Richard Stallman. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License. See the file 'COPYING' for details.' If the program itself is not interactive, you must cause it to print this announcement.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify the Program and use the modified program for commercial purposes, you may be required to consider independent measures to protect these provisions. This license, and its provisions for copying and distribution, is in effect for the entire term of the copyright in the Program, and until you receive permission from the copyright holder to stop doing so. If the program itself is not interactive, you must cause it to print this announcement.

This is in no way intended to restrict your ability to make modifications to the Program or to distribute copies of the Program, but it is intended to protect the rights of the copyright holder to control the distribution of derivative or activities based on the Program.

5. In addition, any aggregation of another work not based on the Program with the Program in such a way that the combined work is a new work, and the combined work is licensed under the same license as the Program.

6. You may copy and distribute the Program for work based on it, under Section 2, if the object code of the work is not based on the terms of Section 1 and 2 above provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to provide complete machine-readable source code. (This alternative is allowed only for noncommercial distribution and only if you received the program in object code or a medium other than such a written offer, in the first place.)

The source code for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For an executable work, complete source code means all the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated interface definition files, plus the script used to control compilation and installation of the executable. However, a special exception to the source code distribution requirement is permitted: if the program is a linker, object code may be distributed in place of the source code. This exception also applies to the distribution of executables (or to the source code, if the program is a linker) on a medium that cannot hold other source code, provided the recipient can receive a copy of the source code on any medium customary for software interchange.

4. You may copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program as you see fit, provided you first notify the copyright holder of your intention to do so. You may not sublicense, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program if you do not receive permission from the copyright holder to do so. If you do not receive permission from the copyright holder, you may not sublicense, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program. However, parties who have received copies, or rights, from you under this license may not be required to receive your permission to do so. Each licensee is addressed as 'you'.

5. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not agreed to it. However, no other arrangement to sublicense or modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. These activities are prohibited by the terms of this license. Therefore, you must make a copy of this license and keep it with the Program or works based on it.

6. Each user who redistributes the Program for work based on the Program, the recipient automatically receives a license from the Program's author to copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program to other recipients. You may not charge for this license, and you may not impose additional restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted herein. You are not responsible for enforcement compliance by third parties to this license.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent issues), conditions are imposed on you (whether by court order, agreement or otherwise) that conflict with this license, you may, under this license, terminate your obligations to comply with any paragraph of this license as to that particular patent or trademark, or any other rights that are covered by this license. In such cases, this license terminates for all copyright owners to whom you have no control over the distribution of the Program or works based on it. For example, if a patent owner would sue to prohibit you from redistributing the Program, you may not distribute the Program as long as you are under this license. You may, however, still distribute copies of the Program or works based on it, provided you comply with the other provisions of this license.

8. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not agreed to it. However, no other arrangement to sublicense or modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. These activities are prohibited by the terms of this license. Therefore, you must make a copy of this license and keep it with the Program or works based on it.

9. If you wish to incorporate part of the Program into other programs or works, you may do so under the terms of this license, provided you comply with the other provisions of this license. In such cases, this license incorporates the limitation of it written in the body of this license.

10. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a particular version number of this license, you must comply with that version of the license. If the Program does not specify a version number of this license, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

13. If you wish to incorporate part of the Program into other programs or works, you may do so under the terms of this license, provided you comply with the other provisions of this license. In such cases, this license incorporates the limitation of it written in the body of this license.

14. If you wish to incorporate part of the Program into other programs or works, you may do so under the terms of this license, provided you comply with the other provisions of this license. In such cases, this license incorporates the limitation of it written in the body of this license.

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to ensure this is to make it available under the public domain. You may do this in one of two ways:

- 1. To do so, attach the following notice to the program. It is up to you to determine whether you wish to include the notice in the source code or the binary, and such file should have at least the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

Just like to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does. > Copyright (C) 1989, name of author(s)

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by e-mail and paper mail. If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode.

Conveyance version 01 Copyright (C) year, name of author Conveyance uses with AGGREGATED NO WARRANTY for details type 'show w' only if from internet, use the address in the following line

The hypothetical command 'show w' and 'show c' should show the appropriate parts of the GNU General Public License. The command you use to be labeled something other than 'show w' and 'show c' should mean 'show these files of GNU GPL' whenever such program.

You should also get your employer (if you work for a program) or your school, if any, to add a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

"By using, copying, distributing or taking any action in reliance on the program 'Connection' (which makes passes at computers) written by James Naicker, I agree that I am not, in any way, being held liable for any damages or for any loss of profits or business resulting from the use of the program."

This General Public License does not permit incorporating our program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subprogram of a larger program, you may distribute it under a license that is derived from our license only for the subprogram. If this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this license.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 3, 29 June 2007
Copyright (C) 2007 Free Software Foundation, Inc. <http://fsf.org/>
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

This version of the GNU Lesser General Public License incorporates the terms and conditions of version 3 of the GNU General Public License, supplemented by the additional permissions listed below.

0. Additional Definitions.
As used herein, "this License" refers to version 3 of the GNU Lesser General Public License, and the "GNU GPL" refers to version 3 of the GNU General Public License.

"The Library" refers to a covered work governed by this License, other than an Application or a Combined Work as defined below.
An "Application" is any work that makes use of an interface provided by the Library, but is not otherwise based on the Library. Part of the interface is defined by a class provided by the Library; a class that is named a mode of using an interface provided by the Library.

A "Combined Work" is a work produced by combining or linking an Application with the Library. The particular version of the Library which is combined with the Application is the "Linked Version".

The "Corresponding Source" for a Combined Work means the Corresponding Source for the Combined Work, excluding any source code for portions of the Combined Work that, considered in isolation, are based on the Application, and not on the Linked Version.

The "Corresponding Application Code" for a Combined Work means the source code of the Application, together with any source code for the portions of the Combined Work that are used to implement the Application, but excluding the source code for the portions of the Combined Work that are based on the Application, and not on the Linked Version.

1. Exception to Section 3 of the GNU GPL.
You may convey a covered work under sections 3 and 4 of this License without being bound by section 3 of the GNU GPL.

2. Conveying Modified Versions.
If you modify a copy of the Library, and if you distribute a copy of that modified copy, you must make clear to anyone receiving such copy that any changes you have made are not covered by this License. For example, you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

a) Under this license, provided that you make a good faith effort to remove or mark the modified portions of the Library, you may perform whatever part of its purpose remains meaningful, or

b) under the GNU GPL, with copy of the additional permissions of this License applicable to that copy.

3. Object Code Incorporating Material from Library Header Files.
The object code form of an Application may incorporate material from a header file that is part of the Library. You may convey such object code without restriction, provided you clearly separate in your documentation any material that is licensed under this License from any material that is licensed under different terms.

a) You must accompany the object code with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

b) You must accompany the object code with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

4. Combined Works.
You may convey a Combined Work under terms of your choice that, taken together, effectively do not restrict modification of the Library or the Application in the way required by sections 3 and 4. You may also convey such a work under the terms of section 4.

5. Distribution of Executable Objects.
a) You may distribute an executable object containing the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

b) You may distribute an executable object containing the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

6. Proprietary Modifications.
You may convey a Combined Work under terms of your choice that, taken together, effectively do not restrict modification of the Library or the Application in the way required by sections 3 and 4. You may also convey such a work under the terms of section 4.

7. Copying and Distribution with Source Code.
a) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

b) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

8. Copying and Distribution with Source Code.
a) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

b) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

9. Copying and Distribution with Source Code.
a) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

b) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

10. Copying and Distribution with Source Code.

b) You may convey a copy of the Library, if you accompany it with a copy of the GNU GPL and this License, and you must indicate on the package in which case you have modified the Library.

where to find the applicable term.

Additional terms, permissions or non-permissions, may be stated in the form of separately written licenses or stated as exceptions; the above requirements apply either way.

3. Termination
You may not propagate or modify a covered work except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to propagate or modify it is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this License, including any patent licenses granted under the terms of paragraph 11 of this License.

However, if you cease all violation of this License, then your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated (a) retroactively, unless and until the copyright holder explicitly and exclusively states that the patent holder or copyright holder will not grant you such license, or (b) unless the copyright holder has expressly stated that it will only grant you such license if you have received explicit permission from the patent holder or copyright holder. This provision does not apply to any other patents or copyrights. If you cease all violation of this License, then your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated (a) retroactively, unless and until the copyright holder explicitly and exclusively states that the patent holder or copyright holder will not grant you such license, or (b) unless the copyright holder has expressly stated that it will only grant you such license if you have received explicit permission from the patent holder or copyright holder. This provision does not apply to any other patents or copyrights.

5. Acceptance Not Required for Having Copies
You are not required to accept this License in order to receive or to copy a copy of the Program. Ancillary propagation of a covered work resulting from a combination of other covered and non-covered transmission and distribution arrangements does not require you to accept this License, but you do accept it if you have received or copy a copy of the Program under this License. Therefore, by modifying or propagating a covered work, you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so.

6. Automatic Licensing of Downstream Recipients
Each time you convey a covered work, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor, to run, modify and propagate that work, subject to this License. You are not responsible for enforcing this license on those persons with this License.

8. "Netty Transaction" is a transaction transferring control of an organization, or substantially all assets of an organization, or merging organizations. If propagation of a covered work results from a netty transaction, each party to that transaction who receives a copy of the work also receives whatever license(s) to the work the party's predecessor in interest had or could have asserted (if it were to disavow its predecessor's interest, it is presumed that it or its predecessor had it or had it with reasonable efforts).

11. Patents
A "contributor" is a copyright holder who authorizes use under this License of the Program or a work on which the Program is based. The work thus licensed is called the contributor's "contributor version".

Each contributor grants you a non-exclusive, automatic, irrevocable, exclusive license under the contributor's essential patent claims for the duration of the patent's term, to make, use, sell, offer for sale, import and otherwise distribute the contents of its contributor version.

In the following two paragraphs, a "patent license" is any express agreement or commitment, however denominated, not to enforce a patent (or a similar right) against a person or entity that practices the program, to the extent that the person or entity makes such a patent license available to you under applicable patent law.

If you convey a covered work, knowingly relying on a patent license, and the Corresponding Source of the work is not available for anyone to copy, from any person, under the terms of this License, you must also, at the time of conveyance, put on record for everyone to see, in a readily accessible place, a statement of your understanding of how you will fulfill your obligation of providing Source for the work, if it were to be required for the purposes of this License. If you place such a statement on record, you shall also, at the time of conveyance, put on record for everyone to see, a statement of any other patent licenses, or other intellectual property rights, that you have to the work, in order to comply with the requirements of this License. You shall also, at the time of conveyance, put on record for everyone to see, a statement of any other patent licenses, or other intellectual property rights, that you have to the work, in order to comply with the requirements of this License. You shall also, at the time of conveyance, put on record for everyone to see, a statement of any other patent licenses, or other intellectual property rights, that you have to the work, in order to comply with the requirements of this License.

If, pursuant to or in connection with a single transaction or arrangement, you convey, or arrange for the conveying of, a covered work, and grant a patent license to some of the parties receiving the covered work, then the patent license you grant is automatically extended to all recipients of the covered work and its derivative works.

A patent license is "discriminatory" if it does not include within the scope of its coverage, activities the exercise of which are conditioned on the non-exercise of one or more of the rights that are specifically granted under this License. You may not convey a covered work if you have a discriminatory patent license, or if you are a party to a discriminatory patent license which is discriminatory, unless you also secure a patent license to the extent that the license you grant is discriminatory. You may not convey a covered work if you are a party to a discriminatory patent license which is discriminatory, unless you also secure a patent license to the extent that the license you grant is discriminatory.

12. No Surrender of Others' Freedom
If conditions are imposed on you by patent law or by a patent that would conflict with the conditions of this License, you may, to the extent necessary, make limited exceptions to the conditions of this License, in order to comply with the conditions of the patent law or patent. You may not convey a covered work if you are a party to a discriminatory patent license which is discriminatory, unless you also secure a patent license to the extent that the license you grant is discriminatory.

13. Use with the GNU Affero General Public License
Notwithstanding any other provision of this License, you have permission to link to the GNU Affero General Public License into a single combined work, and to convey the resulting work. The terms of this License will apply to the combined work, and the terms of the GNU Affero General Public License, will apply to the separate parts of the combined work.

14. Revised Versions of this License
The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the GNU General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies that a certain numbered version of the GNU General Public License applies to it and you have received a copy of the GNU General Public License for a different version, you may choose to apply this License to the copy you receive. If the Program does not specify a version number of the GNU General Public License, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

If the Program specifies that a proxy can decide which future version of the GNU General Public License to use, that proxy's public statement of acceptance of a version permanently authorizes you to choose that version for the Program.

Later license versions may give you additional or different permissions. However, no additional obligations are imposed on any author or copyright holder as a result of your choosing to follow a later version.

15. Disclaimer of Warranty
There is no warranty for the program, to the extent permitted by applicable law. Except when otherwise stated in writing, the copyright holder and/or other parties provide the program "as is" without warranty of any kind, either expressed or implied, including, but not limited to, the implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for a particular purpose. You are responsible for determining the appropriateness of using the program and assume all risks associated with its use.

16. Limitation of Liability
In no event shall the copyright holder be liable for any damages, including general, special, incidental, or consequential damages, or any losses, whether or not the copyright holder was advised of the possibility of such damages, as long as the program was distributed in accordance with the terms of this License.

17. Interpretation of Sections 15 and 16
If the disclaimer of warranty and limitation of liability provided above cannot be made local, then the disclaimer of warranty and limitation of liability shall apply to the entire program. If the disclaimer of warranty and limitation of liability provided above cannot be made local, then the disclaimer of warranty and limitation of liability shall apply to the entire program.

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program
If you develop a new program, and you want to use the same public license as the GNU General Public License, you should use the GNU General Public License. If you want to use a different public license, you should use the GNU General Public License as a starting point, and you should modify it to suit your needs. You should also use the GNU General Public License as a starting point, and you should modify it to suit your needs.

Public license permits more latitude for linking other code with the library.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does not restrict the user's freedom to use the library as a component in other programs. It does restrict other free software developers from using the library as a component in their software. However, the Lesser License provides advantages in certain special circumstances.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, so that it becomes a de facto standard. To achieve this, one may employ a special license for the library that allows anyone to use the library in non-free programs. In this case, it is vital to ensure that the library is not itself licensed under a license that would restrict its use in non-free programs.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs makes sense because of the nature of the library. For example, permission to use the GNU C Library in the Windows operating system, or the GNU C++ Library in the Windows operating system, as well as in variant, the GNU/Linux operating system.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less restrictive of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the same freedom to use that program using a modified version of the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Pay close attention to the difference between a work based on the library and a work that uses the library. The former contains code derived from the library, whereas the latter must only combine with the library in order to run.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice that the program is licensed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (also called "this License").

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as to be conveniently linked into application programs (which use some of these functions and data) to form executables.

The "library" may be a part of a larger program, but the library work which has been distributed under these terms is a work based on the library. It is not the case that the library is a part of it, either, unless it is specifically included in the distribution of the larger program, in which case the larger program is not covered by this License; it is only the library that is covered by this License.

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For a library, complete source code means all the source code for the library and all the source code for all headers and interfaces that are used by the library, and the script files and configuration files that are used by the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this License. They are outside its scope. The act of copying a program that uses a library is not restricted, and output from such a program is covered only if it contains code from a work based on the library. Linking of the code of the library with other code to form an executable is not restricted, and the program that uses the library does not fall under this License.

3. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's complete source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an acknowledgment of the author's name and address, and you assume any responsibility for any damage that may be caused by any error in copying or distribution of any such copy.

4. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

5. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, under any terms whatsoever, provided that you publish any modifications you make under the terms of this License. You may distribute such modifications with your copy of the library, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at the same charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Libraries
If you develop a library, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, at reasonable prices, it free software that respects the intellectual and creative freedom of its users. To do this, you must make the library available under these terms (or, alternatively, under the terms of the previous General Public License).

To apply these terms, attach the following notation to the library. It is advised to attach these to the start of each source file in order to effectively convey the location of warranty; and such file should bear a "COPYRIGHT" line and a section to whom the full warranty applies.

Name line (to give the library's name and a brief idea of what it does):
Copyright (C) year - name of author

This library is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2.1 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This library is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU Lesser General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU Lesser General Public License along with this library; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin St, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA

Also send information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail. You should also get your publisher (if you work in an employment or your school), if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the library, if necessary, here is a sample after the name:

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you give the author credit for his or her creation. Some software has no license at all. The GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to suit your situation and to use it for whatever you wish. You may even redistribute copies of free software for a profit. This license applies to most software created by the Free Software Foundation (which is not a profit organization), as well as to any program released under this license by its authors. You may copy it verbatim, but you cannot claim it as your own.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (no charge for this service if you wish), that you receive source code as well as the binary form of the program, that you can change the program and distribute copies of it to others, and that you are free to use your program for whatever you wish, subject to minimal restrictions which you are free to remove.

To protect your rights, we have added certain restrictions to the rights you are free to give. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they receive the source code as well as the binary form if you distribute copies of it.

You must protect the rights of those who copy and distribute the program. This license requires that you do four things to protect these rights: 1) you must display the copyright notice for each copy of the program; 2) you must put the recipients in a position to receive the source code; 3) you must give them the rights to copy and distribute the program; and 4) you must make sure that they also receive the source code.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that redistributors of a free program will inadvertently patent software, thereby making the program non-free. It is our policy, for the GNU project and for other projects we support, to patent software only when it is absolutely necessary to improve the program.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program
If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively convey the definition of "source" to users of the program. It is also a good idea to place this notice in a separate file named copying. This line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.
If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 1989 by your name, all rights reserved.
Permission to use, copy, modify and distribute this program is granted under the terms of the GNU General Public License. See the file COPYING for details.

The canonical form of this notice is: "Copyright (C) 1989 by your name, all rights reserved. Permission to use, copy, modify and distribute this program is granted under the terms of the GNU General Public License. See the file COPYING for details."

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

"Program X, hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program 'X' (which makes passes at compilers) written by James Hacker.

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a sub-library of a proprietary program, you must make sure that the program is distributed with the library. If this is not what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to meet your specific needs - for the next user who comes along to use your program. This license also applies to many other free software programs which are linked to the GNU Library General Public License (see below for details).

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of software freely; that you receive source code or can get it if you wish; that you can change the software or use pieces of it freely in any new program you create; and that you know what happens to your program if it is distributed, modified, or combined with other software.

To protect your rights, we have taken special measures in writing this license. For example, if you distribute copies of software, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must show them these terms so they know their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that copyright holders for certain programs are notified, so they can act to protect their rights. For example, if you distribute a program that is based on the program of a copyright holder, we would like you to make the copyright holder aware. (This may be done by e-mail.)

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid this problem. For this reason, we have written this license to make it clear that any patent must be licensed for everyone's free use or not licensed at all.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

(It does not include other software or hardware, unless the software is an integral part of the hardware and you are distributing the hardware together with the software.)

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted by this license. For example, you may distribute copies of the Program or a work based on the Program in printed form or by means of a computer terminal. You may also make copies for your own personal use, provided the copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty are printed on each copy, and you are not required to provide a copy of this license along with the copy.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your price for software provided in exchange for a fee.

possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file in most circumstances, to the beginning of each source file in all circumstances, and to each individual file in distributed form as well as to the start of each individual file in source form.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does. Copyright (C) year, name of author.

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it tell the user what license it uses under certain conditions; type 'show' for details.

The non-interactive command-line version should also show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. Of course, the command line may not be suitable for this. In that case, print out a separate file with the license text and a pointer to it, and print out the license text on the command line.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if you are a student, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

Yoerges, Inc., hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program, 'GnuPlot', which was created by copyright owner(s) written by James Hester.

Signature of Yoerges, Inc. April 1989
Yoerges, Inc., President of Yoerges, Inc.

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subroutine library, you may consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. If this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

The JeanOpp library's source code, including accompanying documentation, tests and demonstration applications, are licensed under the following conditions:

Reprints (including and the JeanOpp Author explicitly disclaim copyright in all jurisdictions which recognize such a disclaimer). In such jurisdictions, the copyright is retained by the author.

In jurisdictions which do not recognize Public Domain property (e.g. Germany or of Israel), this software is Copyright (c) 2000-2006 by Soren Hovvander, the JeanOpp Author, and is released under the terms of the MIT license (see below).

In jurisdictions which recognize Public Domain property, the user of this software may choose to license the software as: (1) Public Domain, in which case the Public Domain/MIT license conditions described here, as they choose.

The MIT license is almost as close to Public Domain as a license can get, and is described in clear, concise terms at:

<http://www.opensource.org/licenses/MIT-license>

The full text of the MIT license follows:

The MIT license is compatible with both the GPL and commercial licenses; referring one or the other to the Public Domain will be the minor nuisance of being required to keep the above copyright notice and license text in the source code. GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2.1, February 1999

Copyright (C) 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

This license is part of the GNU General Public License, see the section entitled "GNU General Public License" in the distribution which is not allowed.

Prerequisites

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to have and change free software to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the lesser general public license, applies to some free software packages and their derivatives. It is intended to be used by you, the user, to make sure you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is the price of copying that you pay, not the price of freedom that you pay.

If you want to share your own software with others, the GNU General Public License is the license you should use. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender these rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you to protect the rights of others. Here are a few examples:

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that we give you. You must make sure that they receive the same form of the license. You must also make sure that you provide complete source code of the library, so that you can return them if and when they ask for it. You must also make sure that you provide complete source code of the library, so that you can return them if and when they ask for it.

We protect your rights with a two-step method: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

To protect this distributor, we have taken other steps: we have written a license for the library, which is the GNU General Public License. This license is designed to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of free software. We wish to avoid this threat. We have no way to ensure that the patent holders will not attempt to prevent the free distribution of our software. We therefore wish to advise you that there are some risks to the freedom of the software.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, is more liberal than the GNU General Public License. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is a new derivative work, and the combination of the two is a new derivative work. The Lesser General Public License permits you to link your program with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, and to distribute the combination of the two.

We call this license the "lesser" General Public License because it is less restrictive than the "greater" General Public License. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to restrict the rights of the recipients of a program. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs enables the user to use a large body of free software. For example, permission to use the GNU C library in non-free programs enables the user to use a large body of free software. For example, permission to use the GNU C library in non-free programs enables the user to use a large body of free software.

Although the Lesser General Public License is a less restrictive license than the GNU General Public License, it is still a license. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Pay close attention to the differences between the GNU General Public License and the Lesser General Public License. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor. It is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to share with your neighbor.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

8. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party indicating that it may be distributed under the terms of this license and is not otherwise licensed under this license. Each license is addressed as "you".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as to be conveniently linked with application programs which use some of these functions and data in four circumstances:

The "library" below refers to any such software library or work which has been distributed under these terms. It "works" under the Library's license either the library or any derivative work under copyright law that, in its use, it has substituted the library or a component of it for a part of its own code, so that the user need not install separate copies of the library and its components. It is translated straightforwardly into another language, "librarylike", translation is not needed to make it use the library's code.

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For a library, this includes the human-readable source code, plus any related information such as scripts to automate the building process and the associated documentation.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted by this license. They may be done for any purpose, and under any conditions except where otherwise stated. No patent shall be asserted against a licensee who exercises any right granted by this license, provided that it does not result in a new patent claim or in the granting of a new patent claim. Whether that is true depends on what the licensee does and what the program that uses the library does.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Library's complete source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an appropriate notice that refers to this license and you conspicuously indicate that you are making a copy of it.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Library or any portion of it, thus forming a work based on the Library, and copy and distribute such modifications and the Library together under a license that is not a sublicense, subject to the following conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a data base that is not provided by the library, you are free to use that facility, other than as an argument passed when the facility is invoked. However, you must make a good faith effort to replace that facility in some form in the modified library. For example, if a facility is called by a name that is well known to users of the library, and your facility is not used as the sole reason for using the library, then your facility must still be called by that name. However, you may change the names of arguments passed to the facility.

For example, a function in a library to compute square roots has a name that is widely known to users of the library, and your facility may use it to help compute squares. This is no violation if you compute square roots by a method that is not used as the sole reason for using the library, and you name the new function "squares" instead of "sqrt".

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are not derived from the library, you can use them separately from the library, and you may place them in separate works. "But" you must make sure these sections do not form part of the modified library. The distribution of separate works is not subject to the requirements of this License. However, the distribution of the whole must be on the terms of this License, and you must cause any copies of the whole to be marked as such. If you do not mark your copies as such, you are not in compliance with this license.

Then, it is not the intent of this section to claim rights or protect your claims in any other way than to protect the rights to work written entirely by you; neither, the license is intended to prevent you from making and publishing your work under a license that differs from this License.

3. In addition, you aggregation of another work not based on the library with the Library (or with a work based on the Library) as a whole is a license of distribution and/or modification, subject to the following conditions:

a) You may not apply the terms of the ordinary GNU General Public License to any other code within the aggregation. Instead, you must use a license which permits others to copy, modify and redistribute the code as a separate work, provided the rights granted by the license to those who copy, modify and redistribute the code are not less than the rights granted by this license to those who copy, modify and redistribute the code.

4. You may copy and distribute the Library for a portion or derivative of it under Section 2) in object code or executable form under the terms of Sections 3 and 4 above provided that you accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which you must distribute in accordance with paragraphs 1 and 2 above. You may distribute the machine-readable source code in a file or files separate from the other files, provided that you distribute the machine-readable source code with the other files.

5. A program that contains no derivation of any portion of the Library, but is designed to work with the Library (by means of a shared library or otherwise) is not a derivative work of the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License.

When linking a work that uses the Library with the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License, you may use the following terms:

When a "work that uses the Library" uses material from a header file which is part of the Library, the "work that uses the Library" is not a derivative work of the Library even though the source code is not distributed. It is a derivative work of the Library if the work is distributed with the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, but the work is not actually distributed by the work that uses the Library. The threshold for this to be true is not precisely defined by law.

If the work that uses the Library is a derivative work of the Library, the work that uses the Library is not a derivative work of the Library if the work is distributed with the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, but the work is not actually distributed by the work that uses the Library.

6. A program that contains no derivation of any portion of the Library, but is designed to work with the Library (by means of a shared library or otherwise) is not a derivative work of the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License.

When linking a work that uses the Library with the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License, you may use the following terms:

The threshold for this to be true is not precisely defined by law.

7. If the work that uses the Library is a derivative work of the Library, the work that uses the Library is not a derivative work of the Library if the work is distributed with the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, but the work is not actually distributed by the work that uses the Library.

If the work that uses the Library is a derivative work of the Library, the work that uses the Library is not a derivative work of the Library if the work is distributed with the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, or if the work is distributed without the Library, but the work is not actually distributed by the work that uses the Library.

10. A program that contains no derivation of any portion of the Library, but is designed to work with the Library (by means of a shared library or otherwise) is not a derivative work of the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License.

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to run your business or the community. All four freedoms are the goal of the GNU General Public License. You can distribute copies of the software as you wish, and you can also improve it. For example, you can correct bugs or add new features to suit your local conditions. You can distribute copies of the software as you wish, and you can also improve it. For example, you can correct bugs or add new features to suit your local conditions.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for that service if you wish), that you receive source code or can get it if you wish, that you can change the program if you wish, and that you can distribute copies of your modified versions if you wish.

By making the program a GPL, you grant everyone the right to copy, distribute and/or modify the program. You are not restricted to certain recipients for your copies, nor are you restricted to certain recipients for your modifications. You are not restricted to certain recipients for your copies, nor are you restricted to certain recipients for your modifications.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must show them how to access the source code.

As a condition, you may only charge for your physical medium of transport. You may charge for your physical medium of transport. You may charge for your physical medium of transport. You may charge for your physical medium of transport.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want its recipients to know that what they have is not our work, to protect their own reputations for their own work. It is only natural to want to protect our reputations for our own work. It is only natural to want to protect our reputations for our own work.

Finally, you should notice that the GNU General Public License is not a license to use the program. It is a license to copy, distribute and/or modify the program. It is a license to copy, distribute and/or modify the program. It is a license to copy, distribute and/or modify the program.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice in its source code stating it is licensed under the terms of this License. You should also get your hands off of the work as a program or your materials. `'how c'` is a handy file for the license. For the program, use `'how w'`.

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a derivative library, you may consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. If this is what you want, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2, 20 June 1989
Copyright (C) 1989 Free Software Foundation, Inc. <http://fsf.org>
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this License document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The GNU General Public License is a free, copyleft license for software and other kinds of works.

The licenses for most software and other practical works are designed to allow you to do what you wish to do with the work. You may not use the GNU General Public License to restrict the rights of others to use copies of the software you have written. You are not permitted to control others' access to what they deliver to you. In addition, you are not permitted to attempt to enforce other people's patent claims against their exercise of these general rights.

You are not permitted to sublicense the software to others in any way. However, you are permitted to make a copy of the software for your own use, and to modify it to suit your needs. You may charge a fee for your version of the software, and you may charge any fee or no fee for your version of the software.

To protect your rights, we need to prevent others from denying you the rights or asking you to surrender these rights. Therefore, you have certain responsibilities if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it: responsibilities to respect the freedoms of others.

For example, if you distribute copies of the software, you must let others receive a copy of the original program from you. If you modify it, you must also make available to others the modified program. You must make sure that they receive the modified program with all the freedoms that your original program has. You must make sure that you do not impose any additional restrictions on the recipients of your program.

Developers that use the GNU GPL protect your rights with two steps: (1) assert copyright in the software, and (2) offer you the license giving you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify it.

For the developer's protection, the GPL clearly requires that there is no warranty for this free software. For each user and contributor, the absence of warranty prevents this license from being used to enforce any second-hand restrictions on the activities of anyone who uses the program.

Some developers are designed to deny others access to their work and the work they have derived from it. They claim to prevent patent infringement. In fact, what they do is to create an artificial barrier to your exercise of the rights that we guarantee you in the GPL. You may refuse to accept our terms, and you may at any time withdraw from participation in the program. You are not obligated to accept our terms unless you wish to do so. It is entirely normal for people to use this license for their own projects with no further connection to the GNU project, as long as they respect its terms.

Finally, you should note that the GPL has been designed to replace the "Copyleft" license in the GPL. All programs and libraries with GPL should also be made available under the terms of the GNU General Public License. It is a matter of time before you are not bound to the GPL, and you should not let this stop you. If you are not sure what you should do, it is best to ask the Free Software Foundation for help.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

0. Definition.

"This License" refers to version 2 of the GNU General Public License.

"Copyright" also means any other legal rights that apply for other kinds of works, such as trademark or patent.

"The Program" refers to any copyrightable work licensed under this License. Each licensee is addressed as "you".

"License" and "recipient" may be individuals or organizations.

"To modify" a work means to copy from or adapt all or part of the work to a new medium or carrier, or to translate or transform the work into a different language, or to make any other kind of copying, such as that required for distribution, storage or retrieval, or to perform any other act that changes the work in any way.

"To convey" a work means any kind of copying that creates a new copy of the work and/or transfers ownership of a copy, in any medium or carrier, and/or to make any other kind of copying, such as that required for distribution, storage or retrieval, or to perform any other act that changes the work in any way.

1. Source Code.

The "source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. "Object code" means any non-source form of a work.

A "derivative work" means any work that is based on the work, in whole or in part, and includes any such modifications and/or additions. It also includes any work that is based on the work, in whole or in part, and includes any such modifications and/or additions.

The "corresponding source" for a work in object code form means all the source code needed to create, install, and use the object code, together with any documentation that comes with the object code.

The Corresponding Source need not include anything that users can regenerate automatically from other parts of the Corresponding Source.

The Corresponding Source for a work in source code form is that same work.

2. Basic Provisions.

All rights granted under this License are granted for the term of copyright in the work, and for extended periods in certain cases.

You may make, run and propagate covered works that you do not convey, provided that you pay for copying them in the same or higher amount as you pay for copying the original work. You may charge a fee for your version of the work, and you may charge any fee or no fee for your version of the work.

Copying under any other circumstances is permitted solely under the conditions stated under conditions 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

3. Copying Source Code.

3.1. Copying Source Code.

3.2. Copying Source Code.

4. Conveying Source Code.

4.1. Conveying Source Code.

4.2. Conveying Source Code.

6. Copying into Physical Media.

6.1. Copying into Physical Media.

6.2. Copying into Physical Media.

7. Other Provisions.

7.1. Other Provisions.

7.2. Other Provisions.

If neither you nor any third party retains the ability to install modified object code on the User Product (for example, the work has been installed as ROM).

The requirement to provide Installation Information does not include a requirement to disclose the location of the Developer's source code for the User Product, or to provide the Developer with access to the User Product in which it has been modified or installed. Access to a network may be denied when the modification itself necessarily and adversely affects the operation of the network or violates the rules and protocols for communication across the network.

Corresponding Source counterpart, and Installation Information provided, as agreed with this section must be in a format that is suitable for automatic processing, and must require no special passwords or key for searching, reading or copying.

7. Additional Terms.

Additional provisions are those that supplement the terms of this License by making exceptions from one or more of its conditions. Such provisions are limited to those that modify the User Product, but may not be used to restrict the rights granted by this License. To the extent that they are not otherwise prohibited by law, it is prohibited to add additional terms to the License, or to alter the license agreement in any way that would restrict the rights granted by this License without regard to the additional provisions.

When you create a copy of a covered work, you may at your option remove any additional provisions from that copy, or from any part of it. Additional provisions may be written to require their removal. It is prohibited to add additional provisions to a covered work for which you have or can give appropriate copyright protection.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this License, no material you add to a covered work may, if authorized by the copyright holder or the licensor, be used to restrict the terms of this License with respect to the material.

a) Requiring warranty or limiting liability differently from the terms of sections 10 and 11 of this License, or

b) Requiring preservation of specified reasonable legal notices or other attributions in that material or in the documents or activities that are distributed in conjunction with that material, or

c) Prohibiting reuse of the material for advertising, promotional, or fundraising purposes, or requiring that modified versions of such material be marked in reasonable ways as different from the original version, or

d) Limiting the use for publicity purposes of names of licensors or authors of the material, or

e) Declining to grant rights under trademark law for use of some trade names, trademarks, or service marks, or

f) Requiring indemnification of licensors and authors of that material by recipients for copyright infringement by recipients only with contractual assumptions of liability to the recipients, for any liability that those contractual assumptions directly impose on licensors or authors.

All other non-permissive additional terms are considered "further restrictions" for purposes of this License. If the Program is not covered by a patent, any provision that purports to restrict the use of the Program by a licensee is a further restriction, you may remove that term. If a license document contains a further restriction but denies relicensing or conveying copies, you may remove that term, but you may not add other terms. A license agreement that prohibits the licensee from using the Program for a certain purpose is a further restriction, you may remove that provision, but you may not add other terms.

If you have a covered work in a format that is not a readable form, you must cause the work to be made available in a readable form in a format that is suitable for automatic processing, and must require no special passwords or key for searching, reading or copying.

Additional terms, provisions or non-permissive may be stated in the form of a separately written license, or stated as exceptions.

8. Termination.

You may not propagate or modify a covered work except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to propagate or modify it is void. You will not be held responsible for infringement by a recipient who does not adhere to this License.

However, if you cease all violation of this License, then your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated (a) provisionally, unless and until the copyright holder explicitly and finally indicates otherwise to you, or (b) permanently, if the copyright holder fails to notify you of the violation by that date prior to 60 days after the cessation.

Moreover, your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated permanently if the copyright holder notifies you of the violation by that date, you cease the violation by that date, and you cure the violation prior to 60 days after the notification.

Termination of your rights under this section does not terminate the license of any other parties to the work. You may terminate the license of your rights under this section if you have notified each of the other parties to the work of the violation by that date, you cease the violation by that date, and you cure the violation prior to 60 days after the notification.

9. Acceptance Not Required for Having Copies.

You are not required to accept this License in order to receive or run a copy of the Program. Acceptance of the terms of this License is required only if you wish to propagate or modify the covered work. These actions define acceptance for purposes of this License. Therefore, by performing any of these actions you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so.

10. Automatic Licensing of Recipients.

Each time you convey a covered work, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to run the work and to modify and propagate copies of the work subject to this License. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this License.

An "entity transaction" is a transaction transferring control of an organization, or substantially all assets of one, or terminating an organization, or merging organizations, or any transaction involving the work results from an entity transaction, each party to that transaction may receive a copy of the work under the license.

The recipient of a copy of the work receives the license from the licensor, not from the party that conveys the work. You may not add any terms to the license that you convey.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2.1, February 1999

Copyright © 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.
This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, hence the version number 2.1.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have the freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some pieces of software that are linked to other software. The Free Software Foundation and other authors who decide to use it. You can use it too, but we suggest you first think carefully about whether this license or the ordinary General Public License is the better way to use it in any particular case, based on the requirements below.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of freely licensed programs. For this reason, we have the right to charge a fee for distributing documents for printing, provided that the price does not exceed the actual cost of copying.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to ask you to pay for these rights. For instance, to prevent distributors from imposing additional charges on you for distributing copies of the library or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that we gave you. You must make sure that they receive the same document that you received from your distributor. You must also make sure that you comply with any conditions that may apply to the library and its components, so that they can rely on the library after making changes to the library and its components. And you must show these terms to them and to the recipients of the library.

We protect your rights, and we help you to protect those of others. We have designed this license to be free of any legal requirements for copyright and trademark. We do not wish to obstruct efforts to clear up any legal problems that have arisen, but we do not want to be involved in any litigation.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a patent for the program. We have therefore written this license so that any patent license obtained for a version of the library must be compatible with the full freedom of use specified in this license.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to certain designated libraries, and is quite different from the ordinary GNU General Public License. We use two licenses to cover parts of the GNU software library, because we want to use different licenses for different parts of the library.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally speaking a combined work, by the definition of the Copyright Law, and the ordinary GNU General Public License therefore governs both the program and the library. The Lesser General Public License permits more lax criteria for linking other works with the library.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the ordinary General Public License. It also provides other free software developers less protection. We have designed this license to be free of any legal requirements for copyright and trademark. We do not wish to obstruct efforts to clear up any legal problems that have arisen, but we do not want to be involved in any litigation.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, to limit or to eliminate copying. In such a case, the copyright owner may wish to make a special arrangement for a particular library, to make it available to non-free programs. In this case, it is quite legal to do so. We encourage you to make such an arrangement if you wish to, but we do not recommend it. If you do so, you should also consider whether the library is a separate and independent work, whether it is a derivative work, and whether it is a separate and independent work.

In other cases, permission to use the library in non-free programs makes a separate sense. For example, permission to use the GNU C library in non-free programs makes sense because the GNU C library is an operating system, as well as its variant, the GNU/Linux operating system.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less protective of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom to modify the program and to distribute modified versions of the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying and distribution are detailed below. Pay close attention to the difference between a "work based on the library" and a "work that uses the library". The former contains code derived from the library, whereas the latter must only combine with the library in order to run.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a work based on the library, or which is otherwise derived from the library, as defined below. This license is also called the "Lesser GPL".

distribute such modifications or work under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

1. The modified work must itself be a software library.
2. The work must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
3. You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all those persons to whom you distribute the work.
4. If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a table of data to be supplied by an application program that uses the facility, other than as an argument passed to the facility, your work must not alter that reference except to name the application program that would supply the facility. The facility shall appear, and be prominent, wherever part of the modified library is distributed.

(For example, if a function in a library to compute square roots has a call to a service routine to obtain the value of the square root, this function must still compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are derived from the library, you must indicate in the distribution of your work that those sections were derived from the library, using the distribution method described in paragraph 4. The requirements apply to the entire work, not just to the modified parts.

This license is intended to assure that the distribution of derivative or modified works is not restricted by copyright law or other restrictive laws based on the library.

In addition, some jurisdictions may require that the library with the library (or with a work based on the library) on a volume of a storage or distribution medium does not have the same work appear on the same medium.

3. The way you apply the terms of the ordinary GNU General Public License instead of this license to a given copy of the library. To do this, you may alter all the notices that refer to this license by changing them to refer to the ordinary GNU General Public License, or to a variant of it. If you do this, you must also make any other changes to the notices that are necessary to make the license work as intended.

4. The way you apply the terms of the ordinary GNU General Public License instead of this license to a given copy of the library. To do this, you may alter all the notices that refer to this license by changing them to refer to the ordinary GNU General Public License, or to a variant of it. If you do this, you must also make any other changes to the notices that are necessary to make the license work as intended.

5. A program that contains no derivative of any portion of the library, but is designed to work with the library by being compiled or linked with it, is called a "work that uses the library". the GNU Library General Public License instead.) You can apply it to your program, too.

When you speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish) to your users. You can charge for distribution of the program if you want, if you want it, that you can charge the software or use copies of it in the free programs, and that you know you can do these things.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether modified or not, you must make sure that everyone who receives a copy also has the right to copy, modify and redistribute copies of the program. And you must make sure that they, too, receive and get their rights.

You protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) use this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each warranty, protection and other, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we would like you to think that what you did to the program is what you are responsible for, so that others will not reflect on the original author's reputation.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions of a free program will indirectly affect patent licenses. In effect, no patent holder would have the power to restrict freedom of use of the program by others. We want to avoid this situation, so that there is no such danger of patent licensing being used to restrict the program's use.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, January 1989

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this License. You may combine code or material which is not under this License with code and material which is, and distribute the work as a whole under the License. You may also distribute code and material which are not under this License in response to requests for code and material for a particular project, provided that you do not otherwise distribute code and material under this License. Exception: if the program itself is interactive but does not contain a notice as described above, you may distribute code and material for it under this License as well.

1. You may copy, distribute, modify, and/or make new versions of a program under this License. You must make any such new versions available under the same License. This License gives you the right to copy, distribute, modify, and/or make new versions of a program under this License for any purpose, provided that you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same License as the original work carries, in each case you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) If the modified program normally reads commands interactively whenever the user enters it, the modified version must display a notice that the program is derived from the original work, and that you are responsible for any changes you make. This notice must appear in all copies of the program. Exception: if the program itself is interactive but does not contain a notice as described above, you may distribute code and material for it under this License as well.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify a program to do more than the original program, your work may be licensed under a different license. You may also combine code and material which is not under this License with code and material which is, and distribute the work as a whole under the License. You may also distribute code and material which are not under this License in response to requests for code and material for a particular project, provided that you do not otherwise distribute code and material under this License. Exception: if the program itself is interactive but does not contain a notice as described above, you may distribute code and material for it under this License as well.

2. If you distribute a program that is not under the License, you must accompany it with the complete corresponding source code for that program, or you must accompany it with the complete corresponding source code for that program in object code or executable form under the terms of section 1 and 2 above provided that you first do one of the following:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange.

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to give any third party, for a charge no more than your cost of physically performing source distribution, a complete and machine-readable copy of the source code on a medium customarily used for software interchange.

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to distribute corresponding source code. This information must accompany the machine-readable source code, and this information must also accompany the source code for a work when the preferred form of the work for copying and distribution is not source code. The source code must be distributed under the same License as the original work. Exception: if the program itself is interactive but does not contain a notice as described above, you may distribute code and material for it under this License as well.

3. You may copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you wish, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

4. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you wish, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not signed it. However, nothing grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. These actions are prohibited by law if you do not accept this License. To modify or distribute the Program for any purpose, you must accept and comply with the terms of this License to do so, and you must also comply with the terms of this License to do so.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program for any purpose, you must do so under the License. You may do so in any medium, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent issues), conditions are imposed on you (whether by court order, agreement or otherwise) that contradict the conditions of this License, you must not comply with them. If you are unable to do so because of conditions that you do not wish to accept, you may not distribute the Program or any derivative works. You may however distribute the Program or any derivative works under a license that you are permitted to use in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patents or by copyrighted interfaces, the original copyright holder must take steps to ensure that the program is distributed in those countries either under a separate license agreement or by other means. This License does not authorize anyone to enforce any such restriction on anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

10. Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program is licensed under the terms of this License, you must indicate the version number of that version of the License that applies to that copy of the Program. If the Program does not specify a version number of the License, you must indicate the version number of the License that applies to that copy of the Program.

11. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

12. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

13. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

14. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must not attempt to enforce any patent claims against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

b) You must not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program under this License if you know or have reason to believe that the program is being copied, modified, sublicensed, or distributed in violation of any applicable patent law or regulation, in order to protect or promote any patent claim or other proprietary right that you know or have reason to believe is being enforced against anyone who distributes the Program under this License.

15. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you comply with the following conditions:

as the successor of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, hence the version number 2.1.)

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software - to make sure the software is free for all its users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some specially designated software packages ("libraries") of the Free Software Foundation and other authors who decide to use it. You can use it too, but we suggest you first check carefully against another license to see what you should do in any particular case, based on the requirements below.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to share and change any software you receive. For this to work, the license must give you the right to copy if you want it, the right to change the software and use pieces of it in new programs, and the right to distribute your own versions.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender these rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library to others.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must ensure that the recipients get the right to copy. You must make sure that they receive, or can get, the source code. If you link other code with the library, you must provide complete object files to the recipients, to allow them to relink them with the library at will. You may not charge for these object files.

We protect your rights with a two-step method: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

To protect this distribution, we have taken other steps that there is no necessity for the free library. First, if the library is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipients must know that what they have is not the original version, so that the original author's reputation will not be affected by problems that might be discovered.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free software program. We wish to avoid patents being used to effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a patent on the program. We therefore require that any patent licensee obtained for a version of the library must be consistent with the full freedom of use specified in this license.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, is a special license to allow linking non-GNU software with the GNU library. It is quite different from the ordinary General Public License. We use this license for certain libraries in order to permit linking those libraries into non-free programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared object, the combination of the two is copyrighted as a whole, unless there is explicit agreement from the copyright holders to allow the combination to be made under a different license. The copyright holder for the library must not be asked to make an exception for this license.

We call this license the "lesser" General Public License because it is less restrictive than the ordinary General Public License. It also provides other free software developers less of an advantage over the ordinary General Public License for their libraries. However, the Lesser General Public License is a special license to allow linking non-GNU software with the GNU library.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs makes a greater number of people want to use a large body of free software. For example, permission to use the GNU C Library in non-free programs would make more people want to use the GNU C library.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less protective of the users' freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom and the ability to use the program using a modified version of the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification are given in the license. A work that uses the library is covered by this license if and only if it is covered by the Lesser General Public License in order to run.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder of either this license or the GNU General Public License in the file called "COPYING".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as a module intended to be linked with application programs to form an executable program.

The "library" below, refers to any such software library or work which is covered by this license. A work based on the library means either the library or any derivative work under copyright law that is based on the library and incorporates a portion of it. Other works which incorporate the library or a portion of it, but are not based on the library, are not covered by this license. For example, a work which merely includes a copy of the library, or a work which uses the library as a data file, is not covered by this license.

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. It includes the design and documentation, in addition to the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated documentation files, plus the scripts used to control compilation and installation of the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this license; they are outside its scope. The act of copying a program into the library is not restricted, and must not be used to circumvent the copyright notice of the library. If you are in doubt, contact the copyright holder of the library.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's source code, provided you copy the copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty. You must also include a copy of this license and the disclaimer of warranty.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option charge for warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the library's source code, if it is in a form that is suitable for making modifications to it, and you may distribute modified versions of the library's source code, provided that you also meet all of the following conditions:

a) The modified work must carry a notice that states who you are, that you have modified the library, and that you have changed the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location.

b) The modified work must carry a notice that states who you are, that you have modified the library, and that you have changed the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location.

c) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or data structure that is not part of the library, you must use the name of that facility in the modified library. You must also use the name of that facility in the modified library.

e) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

f) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

g) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

h) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

i) If you change the file name, the file extension, the file format, or the file location, you must also change the name of the function or data structure that is used to access the modified part of the library.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 3, June 2007

Copyright © 2007 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin Street, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you remain the owner and control the program. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to ensure that the user of the program software to make sure the software is free for all its users. The General Public License applies to most free software. This Foundation publishes the license to make sure the user of the software is aware of the rights and responsibilities that come with using the software. The license is intended to make sure the user of the software is aware of the rights and responsibilities that come with using the software.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of freely licensed programs; to modify them to suit your needs and to improve them for the whole community. You may wish to distribute copies of free software if you want it, but you may not charge others for the software. You may charge for your time or yours, for covering material expenses.
You may charge to support a person or organization that promotes concentrating on making the software free of charge.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid patents to be used against our users. We also want to make sure that you receive the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you. These rights are described in the license.
For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you.
You must make sure that they, too, receive the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and
(2) license the software under the GNU General Public License. You must also make sure that you have the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you.

Also, to protect our users' freedom to use the program, we want to make sure that you have the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you. These rights are described in the license. For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you.

Finally, we want to make sure that you have the full rights of freedom and control that the General Public License grants you. These rights are described in the license. For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that

mouse-clicks or menu items--whatever suits your program.

You should also get your compiler (if you work as a programmer) or your shell, if any, to save a "copyright disclaimer" on the program, if necessary. Here is a sample, with the name:

Program: foo.  hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program
'Commission' (which makes passes at computers) written by James H. Hacker.

Copyright of J. Combs, 1 April 1989
J. Combs, President of USA

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subprogram of a proprietary program, you may use the library, if this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2, June 1989

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 01101 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have control of the program. The General Public License is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of freely downloaded software. To protect your rights, we need to make certain that our users' rights are preserved; that they receive the same freedom that you have. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you, too. In order to protect these rights, we have drafted this license that you can distribute in your software.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you can change the software or use it in any way you wish, that you can redistribute copies of the software, and that you can know who else is copying. To protect your rights, we need to make certain that our users' rights are preserved; that they receive the same freedom that you have. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you, too. In order to protect these rights, we have drafted this license that you can distribute in your software.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also make certain that you only distribute copies of the software, of if you modify it, for you must also make certain that you only distribute copies of the software, of if you modify it.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that our copyright notices remain in all software you distribute.

Finally, if you program is derived essentially from software, you should also make certain that you include in the works you distribute a copy of the original author's license.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice in a prominent form that it is licensed under the terms of this General Public License. The "Program" below refers to the program or other work which is licensed under this license. In order to apply to any other program or other work, the program name must be replaced by the actual name of the program. (Hereafter, "translation" is included without limitation in the term "modification".) Each licensee is addressed as "you".

2. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

3. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

4. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

5. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

6. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

7. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

8. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

9. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

10. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

11. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

12. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an acknowledgment of the person(s) to whom you are redistributing the copy, in a form suitable for reproduction. You must also prominently and appropriately publish to each copy a copy of this license. Disruption of the Program is prohibited by law.

control compilation and installation of the executable. However, as a special exception, the source code distributed need not include anything that is normally distributed (in either source or binary form) with the program on which the executable runs, unless that component itself implements part of the executable.

If distribution of executable or object code is made by offering access to copy files from a designated place, then offering such access does not constitute an offer of distribution. An offer of distribution of the source code, even though third parties are not obligated to use the source code, is an offer of distribution.

4. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt to exercise these rights without the express written permission of the copyright holder is prohibited. This license will not have its terms terminated as long as such parties comply with the above conditions.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not signed it. However, copying this program to run it constitutes an offer of distribution of the Program or of its derivative works. You must accept this License, and you must sublicense or distribute under its terms any derivative works you may create. Therefore, by copying or distributing the Program, you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so, and all its terms and conditions for copying, distribution or modification of the Program or work based on it.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, distribute or modify the Program subject to these terms and conditions. You may not impose any further restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted herein. You are not responsible for enforcement compliance by third parties to this license.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement, you are unable to comply with any of the above conditions or any other conditions imposed on you, you may nevertheless distribute copies of the Program if you have taken reasonable steps to remove any information relating to your claims that you are unable to comply with any of the above conditions or any other conditions imposed on you. You may distribute under this license any work you create under this license, even as a consequence you may not distribute the Program at all. For example, if a patent litigation would prevent you from distributing the Program, you may still distribute it under this license if you have taken reasonable steps to remove any information relating to your claims that you are unable to comply with any of the above conditions or any other conditions imposed on you.

If any portion of this section is held invalid or unenforceable under applicable law, the balance of the section is intended to apply and the section as a whole is intended to apply in other jurisdictions.

It is not the purpose of this section to induce you to infringe any copyright, to engage in unfair competition, or to violate any law or regulatory or administrative provisions. This section is intended to make clear that in exercising the rights of the free software distribution system, you are not permitted to practice such tactics. Any practice that is prohibited by this section is intended to be consistent with the spirit and purpose of this license. It is distributed through any other system and a license cannot be used to restrict that choice.

This section is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the rest of this license.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patent or by copyright law, the copyright holder, by any means, and for any purpose whatsoever, may use a patent or copyright license to enforce such restrictions in those countries. In any case, this license incorporates the limitation as if written in the body of this license.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this license which applies to it and you wish to run the Program under the terms of that version of the license, you must use either the same version of the license or a later version. If the Program does not specify a version number of this license, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author, to the copyright holder, or to the publisher, to request permission. Make arrangements for this. Our decision will be guided by the two goals of preserving the free status of all derivatives of our free software and of promoting the sharing and reuse of software generally.

NO WARRANTY
11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHEN OTHERWISE STATED IN WRITING THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE PROGRAM "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

12. IN NO EVENT UNLESS REQUIRED BY APPLICABLE LAW OR AGREED TO IN WRITING WILL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS OR CONTRIBUTORS BE LIABLE FOR ANY DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR INABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM (INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO LOSS OF DATA OR DATA BEING RENDERED INACCURATE OR LOSSES OR DAMAGES ARISING FROM THE USE OF THE PROGRAM) OR ARISING FROM OR OUT OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If it is not a package, separate the notices as indicated here. Each notice should have at least the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:
Copyright (C) 2002-2012, Jaume Soler <jsoler@gnome.org>

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the license, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.
If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 2002-2012, Jaume Soler <jsoler@gnome.org>
This program comes with ABSOLUTELY NO WARRANTY; for details type 'show w'. This is free software, and you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions. See the file 'COPYING' for more details.

The interactive commands 'show w' and 'show c' should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. Of course, the commands you use may be called something other than 'show w' and 'show c'; they could even be mouse-clicks or menu-items--whatever suits your program.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the license, or (at your option) any later version.

©-Mark is Free Software. It is copyrighted by Wolfgang Denk and other authors who contributed code from the actual source code and the all right reserved for details. You can redistribute ©-Mark under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation. Most of it can also be found in the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation.
NOTE: This license does "not" cover the so-called "standalone" binaries which are distributed with the source code. These binaries are not covered by this license, but they are covered by the license of the software which they were developed with. For example, the header of "device work" - see file LICENSE/Exceptions. For details.

Also note that the GPL and the other licenses are copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation and other organizations. You have to read their licenses to see what they really allow and what they are not allowed to do. ©-Mark is not copyrighted by me and others who actually wrote it.
- Wolfgang Denk

Like many other projects, ©-Mark has a tradition of including his license in the source code. This was not only done to make the source code available to everyone, but also to make it possible to find out what the same license are referred to by a number of different projects. The original goal of this license was to provide a simple and clear way to handle the license information.
I made this easier, such that the header of the source file will replace with a single line reference to unique license identifier as defined by the GNU General Public License (GPL). For example, in a source file the full "GPL v2.0 or later" header text will be replaced by a single line:

SPDX-License-Identifier: GPL-2.0
Identify the license terms of all files in the source tree should be defined by such license identifiers, in case a file can contain more than one license identifier.
If a "SPDX-License-Identifier:" line references more than one unique license identifier, then this means that the respective file is used under the terms of either of these licenses, i. e. with SPDX-License-Identifier: GPL-2.0 AND BSD-3-Clause you can choose between GPL-2.0 and BSD-3-Clause licensing.
We use the SPDX Unique License Identifiers; these are available

Version 3.1, February 1999
Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document.

[This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also contains text defining the license for the GNU Library Public License, version 2, which is the version number 2.1.]

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to ensure your freedom. More precisely, it aims to protect the rights of those who share code or information with you to do the same thing to others.

This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to some software packages. It is intended to guarantee your freedom as much as the GNU General Public License. However, it has weaker obligations on its licensees. The obligations of this license are detailed below.
When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Trademark protection is not covered by this license. You may also want to avoid certain intellectual property rights held by others. For this purpose, you may want to use additional licenses.
For more information on this, see the section on "Additional Licenses" in the GNU General Public License. You can also use the GNU Lesser General Public License to protect your rights in software you develop. See the section on "Protecting Your Rights in Software" in the GNU General Public License.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, you must also provide the source code for the library, whether you are distributing it in source or binary form. You must also make available the source code for the library, whether you are distributing it in source or binary form. You must also make available the source code for the library, whether you are distributing it in source or binary form. You must also make available the source code for the library, whether you are distributing it in source or binary form.

We protect your rights with two main methods. (1) We copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and modify the library.
To protect your freedom, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the free library. Also, in the library itself we put the word "Gnu" instead of "Free" because there is no warranty for the free library. Also, in the library itself we put the word "Gnu" instead of "Free" because there is no warranty for the free library.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot patent technology just because it has developed it. For this reason, we have added to the GNU Lesser General Public License provisions to protect everyone who distributes software. These provisions are intended to make sure that a company cannot patent technology just because it has developed it.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, is more liberal than the GNU General Public License, but it also has certain restrictions. We want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library.
We also want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally speaking a combined work, derivative of the original library. The GNU Lesser General Public License is more liberal than the GNU
General Public License, but it also has certain restrictions.
We want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library. We also want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library.

We call this license the "GNU Lesser General Public License".
It is more liberal than the GNU General Public License, but it also has certain restrictions. We want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library. We also want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the free library.

For example, as a special exception, there may be a patent held by a third party, or patents may be granted to others, or patents may be granted to others, or patents may be granted to others, or patents may be granted to others.

the scope of this license.

3. You may copy and distribute the Program (or a work based on it, under Section 7) in object code or executable form under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above provided that you also do one of the following:

- a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or
- b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to give any third party, for a charge no more than your cost of physically performing source distribution, a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding source code, to be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or
- c) Accompany it with the information you required to run the program in machine-readable form, such as a script, configuration file, or data file, in machine-readable form, and also provide the program in object code form together and only if you provide the program in object code form with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to give any third party, for a charge no more than your cost of physically performing source distribution, a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding source code, to be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange.

The source code for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For an executable work, complete source code means the source code for all modules it contains, and its associated interface definition files, plus the scripts used to control compilation and execution of the program. However, as a special exception, the source code distributed need not include code that normally accompanies an executable binary file with the program, such as the source code for a library which the program normally uses to execute at run time and the operating system on which the executable file runs, unless the component itself accompanies the executable.

If distribution of executable or object code is made by referring to the name of a third party, whether by name or by initial, then the distribution of the source code, even though third parties are not permitted to copy the source code, must also be made available to you, either in printed form or by electronic means (e.g., on a network server) at no charge immediately upon request, and also in machine-readable form, provided the original medium for carrying out any distribution of the source code was in machine-readable form. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this license.

4. You may not copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program as you are permitted to do, unless you understand and agree that you assume all responsibility for any license violations by those you sublicense to. However, you may not sublicense or distribute the Program as you are permitted to do, unless you understand and agree that you assume all responsibility for any license violations by those you sublicense to.

5. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not agreed to it. However, nothing else grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program if you do not accept this license. Therefore, by modifying or distributing the Program (except in accordance with the provisions of Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100), you must also agree to its terms and conditions for copying, distributing or modifying the Program or works based on it.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program) under the terms of this license, you must also make a good faith effort to ensure that the recipients of the program are also informed of the terms of this license. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this license.

7. If, at a court judgment or arbitration proceeding or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement or for any other reason) you are held liable to a third party for damages or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement or for any other reason) you are held liable to a third party for damages or for any other reason, you are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this license. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this license.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2, June 1991
Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, provided that the copyright notice and this permission notice are preserved in all copies.
The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you, as the user, can do what you wish with the software. You are free to give your word of good faith to those who do not wish to be troubled by restrictive licenses of this kind. However, the license for this program is not one of those licenses. It is one of the few licenses that require you to make sure that those who receive the program are also informed of the terms of this license. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this license.

We protect your rights with two things: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal protection to copy (and modify) it.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain you receive certain rights in the copy you make. So, when you redistribute the software, you must pass on to your recipients the same basic rights that we pass on to you, such as the right to copy, distribute, and modify the software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want its recipients to know that what they have is not the original, so that they can take any problems introduced by others will not reflect on the original author's reputation.

Finally, our free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions on the use of copying, distribution, and modification will arise as a result of new patent laws or as a result of claims about the program. To prevent this, we have made it clear that any patent must be licensed for everyone's free use of the program at all.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it is licensed under the terms of this General Public License. The "Program", below, refers to any such program or work, and a "work based on the Program" refers to any work containing the Program or a portion of it, regardless of what separate title is placed on the work and regardless of whether the work is modified. (The copyright notice for a work based on the Program must state the name of the original author of the Program.) Each licensee is addressed as "you".

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this License. They are outside its scope. The act of running the Program is not restricted, and the output from the Program is covered only if the contents constitute a work based on the Program (independent of any program that contains a work based on the Program) and you are making a copy of it.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an appropriate copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty; you must also retain all the notices that refer to this License and to the absence of any warranty; and you must keep any one of these conditions.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in addition to the warranty described above.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion thereof to suit your local requirements, provided that you distribute such modifications or works under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also make all of these conditions:

- a) The modified files must carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
- b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in part bears the name of the author, to be licensed under the same license that applies to the work as a whole.
- c) If the modified program normally reads commands interactively whenever you run it, you must cause it, whenever it prompts, to print or display a message including an appropriate copyright notice and a disclaimer of warranty; and that you may distribute the program under these conditions, and that you may also distribute it under a license of your choice, provided that you also make all of these conditions.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are derived from the Program, you must indicate in the source code of the work which sections are derived from the Program. You must also indicate in the source code of the work which sections are derived from the Program. You must also indicate in the source code of the work which sections are derived from the Program. You must also indicate in the source code of the work which sections are derived from the Program.

3. You may copy and distribute the Program (or a work based on it), under section 2, in object code or executable form under the terms of section 1, provided that you also do one of the following:

- a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the same license that applies to the source code; or, if the program is normally distributed in machine-readable form, accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code to any individual who asks you to do so, at a price no more than the cost of carrying out any reasonable administrative charge.
- b) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to distribute the source code, which must be distributed under the same license that applies to the source code; or, if the program is normally distributed in machine-readable form, accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code to any individual who asks you to do so, at a price no more than the cost of carrying out any reasonable administrative charge.

4. The source code for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For an executable work, complete source code means all the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated interface definition files, plus the scripts used to control compilation and installation of the executable. However, as a special exception, the source code distributed need not include anything that is normally distributed (in accordance with any document accompanying the source code) with the program in question, unless the operating system on which the executable runs, unless the component is an integral part of the executable.

5. If distribution of executable or object code is made by offering access to copy the source code from the same place, then offering to distribute the source code, even though third parties are not charged to copy the source code, is considered to offer to distribute the source code.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, distribute or modify the Program subject to these terms and conditions. You may not remove any of these restrictions on the recipient's exercise of the rights granted herein.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement), you are forced to stop distributing the Program, you may, under these terms, stop distributing the Program. If you do so, you must also stop distributing the Program in any medium. You may, however, distribute copies of the Program in any medium, provided you do so under the terms of this License.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patents or by copyright infringement actions, the restriction applies only to those countries. In other countries, you may distribute and/or use the Program without restriction.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so. You may distribute the other programs under a license of your choice, provided you do so in a way that does not conflict with the requirements of this License.

11. This License is intended to be a model license, and is licensed under the same terms and conditions as the Program it is intended to be used with.

available in Python 3.3 and later versions, see <http://docs.python.org/library/filib.html>.
Filib is built using <http://code.activestate.com>.
An experimental package to read and write files in .rip format, written on top of filib by Victor Volynets volynets@comcast.com, is available in the contrib/README directory of filib.

Notes for some targets:

- For Windows 9x versions, please see win32FILE_READ.txt
- For 68k Macs, software must be compiled without any optimization. With
-O, some library test fails. The test works in 32 bit mode with the -m2 compiler flag. The compiler bug has been reported to gcc.
- filib doesn't work with gcc 2.6.3 on a DEC 386/386SLX under OSF/1 2.1 it works when compiled with cc.
- On Digital Unix 4.0B (formerly OSF/1 on AlphaServer), the cc option -std is necessary to get glibc11 working correctly. This is done by configure.
- filib doesn't work on HP-UX 8.05 with some versions of /bin/cc. It works with other compilers, but "make test" to check your compiler.
- gSOAP is not supported on RISCOS or BEOS.
- For PalmOS, see <http://palmtos.sourceforge.net/>

Acknowledgments:

The offsets format used by filib was defined by Phil Kerr. The offsets and rip file format features described here are "PalmOS-specific" means that all the code are the same as to cite here. I appreciate various improvements in filib, they were a real pleasure.
